Ancient Knowledge

Synopsis

Revealing things which have been kept secret from the foundation of the world. Proven with mathematics this book describes genuine ancient knowledge that conflicts with modern science but upholds the Biblical story of Genesis.

George Curtis must be a truly gifted mathematician with a gift creating complex equations from obtuse observations. I'm not knocking this book at all. Actually I found it very engrossing. Once I began reading it I couldn't put it down until I finished. Being a Christian, though not a devout one, or should I say not a "fanatical" one I found that the connections the author made with Genesis especially enlightening. Genesis never made a lot of sense to me but it does now. The only nit that I would pick with the author is his assertion that Stonehenge is the biblical tower of Babel. It's neither a tower or a remnant of one it's unmistakably a complex circle of stone work. Oh sure, I guess it could have been constructed by Noah and his band of flood survivors but why would they have marched all the way from mount Ararat in Turkey all the way across Europe and over the English channel just to build a circle of stones using advanced mathematics representing the solar system? This seems like a bit of a stretch to me. Why didn't that band of survivors from the flood stay closer to their landing spot, perhaps in Turkey somewhere? Perhaps at Gobekli Tepe which IS in Turkey. I loved this book, but I think the historical details need to be looked at more closely. Given the contradictions to logical thinking I'm reserving final judgment before changing my entire belief system.

Mr Curtis did a wonderful job of exposing and defining information that is outside the realm of science and religion. I couldn't put this book down. I am presently unemployed but found that reading this book and absorbing the shocking and proven information was far more important than looking for a job. He spoke of astronomy and several other areas of science and was able to create and explain a much bigger picture of who we are and where we come from in such an intelligent manner that would make Sherlock Holmes seem like a mere third grader in his logical approach. I am so sorry that I am not more articulate to explain more deeply the significance of what was written by this wonderful man. An open mind is necessary and with that you will go for a trip that is way beyond your wildest expectations. I have never read a more compelling narrative that has impacted my perception of our world, its history and its future. If you have a scientific background please don't be so easy to dismiss what is being said here. Set aside your personal belief system if it falls contrary to what is written here and just go for the ride and really really absorb the weight of what Mr. Curtis is trying to explain here. I love studying astronomy and physics. I always felt there was a far greater intelligent force at work where not being a true scientist myself could clearly see and know in my gut that that force was in control of things that just couldn't be explained in any other way except now Mr. Curtis has named that force. Thank you sir for exposing the treasures as you said you would and in an ever so eloquent style. Please let this not be the end of your writing career.

I have to say that the presentation of the material was lengthy, like beating a dead horse just to do it. the author did a lot of research and made his case flawlessly. I have a new view on things as a result of this book. I can only say, read it till the end and keep an open mind.

This book was written with the grammar, vernacular, and tempo of something for middle school children. I have never read anything by this author before, and I definitively will not waste my time reading his other book. Is this format of speaking, as to an audience of semi-literate adults, with an abundance of grammar, punctuation, and spelling errors, normal for this author, or did perhaps my Kindle version download badly?

Very good read and made me a believer of his hypothesis. I feel as if my eyes and mind are a little more open though I think most of these questions about the knowledge of Noah are already answered by the Kabbalah which must have been a part of the knowledge taught to all of the children of Adam then.

Curtis makes a good case for Stonehenge containing information about the planetary orbits which had to have come from an intelligent source that was beyond its time. I am not convinced about it being the site of Babel. The Bible says clearly that the Tower of Babel was made in the plain of Sinar and near to where Babylon was founded.

The author based his findings on mathematics - I am not an expert in the advanced field thereof but as he claims the equations to be correct I accept his word for that. For me it was an eye-opener on many aspects including scriptures in the Bible, It made me see the creation and the universe in another light as previously. Sometimes his statements appear to be a bit far fetched but as so little is really known, why not give it a go. A most interesting book and I enjoyed the style of writing.

The author has asked and answered a lot of questions that I have pondered over for many years. Whether or not he is right about his answers is not conclusive, but he does make an interesting and well thought out case for his beliefs. He has clearly given a lot of thought and spent a lot of time on his subject. He certainly gives his readers something challenging to think about. One thing he doesn't do however is give an explanation of who God is. He writes extraterrestrial beings as though they were the angels and God of the bible. What he says is thoughtful and interesting, but even if what he says is true he still doesn't explain where the extraterrestrials or the universe itself came from. Of course I can't blame him for that. It seems evident that the human "mind" is incapable of that at the present time and likely will never be unless there is another life yet to come. I do recommend this book. It is well thought out and worth reading.
