Customer Reviews

First let me say that there is not a SINGLE aiming system that will work for every shot PERIOD. The proximity of the object ball to a pocket, the angle, the distance from the cue ball....all have an effect on how we visualize the shot (as well as the actual perception of the rails and table in relation to the shot at hand). I will say without hesitation that this book is pure rubbish and a waste of ANY players time. I would suggest a review of 'ghost ball' first and foremost so the concept of what needs to happen when two balls collide to get them in a pocket. Next you would want to research parallel aiming. I probably use the concepts of this more than anything and I can easily run over 100 balls in a row in straight pool daily using this concept alone. For distant cut shots I am quite happy with pivot aiming, (CTE, etc) methods. Why? With these methods you can aim at the ball instead of out in space then pivot and shoot. Most importantly the key to making shots is to have a consistent approach to the ball and consistent stroke. After that you really just need to hit a LOT of balls. Repetition is PARAMOUNT and not always playing a game against a buddy. I just throw balls on the table and hit them over and over and over. It becomes second nature. (see video. I average 6.5 seconds a shot for 15 balls. This is how I warm up daily for shot visualization BEFORE I actually start my real practice) After you are potting 14 out of 15 balls then you have to learn to work on cue ball control, pattern play, safety play, tactics...etc.... In my opinion this is one of the greatest games ever invented. PS....
