If there were a Nobel Prize for bringing essential knowledge to humanity, Dolores Cannon should absolutely be the first to be awarded it. In my opinion, this volume is better and even more mind-expanding than the preceding two volumes, since Dolores' hypnotized subjects present us with such new concepts - forms of life we would hardly have been able to imagine, new types of walk-ins, powerful beings come to end all life on Earth but only if this should become absolutely necessary (no need for alarm), knowledge of the very highest calibre provided by the subconscious (presumably it's the same subconscious speaking through everyone), including the latest information about the new Earth, and much, much more. This is another weighty tome (amounting to 693 pages) and space does not permit me to refer to but a few of these fascinating forms of life/revelations. One preliminary item of information I would like to convey is something Dolores cites from a book by O. T. Bonnett she has published: when we wish to be healed we should talk to the cells in our body to get their cooperation and when speaking to them we should always refer to ourselves as "we" - in this way we seem to them to be the voice of God, and we better get their attention. Also, the subconscious which Dolores so often communicates with during her regressions, and that always possesses the totality of the available knowledge, always refers to itself in the plural form. As regards healing, we learn that we can ask the body (and perhaps the subconscious?) to dissolve any blocks that might exist, or visualize the block or blocks being dissolved. The theory of germs causing disease is just a theory. Germs exist but they're not the cause of illness.
